

First tips to the school

By “Rana Malak

Impressions are very important. Especially those our beloved students take on their first school days. Students arrive with a mix of emotions. Most of them tend to feel nervous and anxious and that's quite healthy because kids are usually too attached to their parents or home at their young age.

Our teachers try their best to ensure that their classrooms are safe and welcoming not only on the student's first day but all year long.

Our goal is to give our students something to commemorate. As a result, the few first days of school are all about fun and comfort.

We try to engage our students all together by setting up enjoyable activities and games that will make them fit into their new environment quickly. Students are

Each student is handed out an ID card which the teacher attaches to their shirts. The ID card contains the students full name, class, Guardian's phone number, and details about the bus that transports them in case of registering as a bus-rider.

We take the first day of school as an opportunity to present our vision of class to our prospective students in a simple way that they can understand and look forward to. Teachers introduce themselves warmly and give each student the chance to speak about their names, families, hobbies, etc. In order for them to feel less nervous.

Our students are the base of our work and for a teacher to succeed in teaching we must make sure that the main element is built on compassion, comfort and cooperation.
